The state railroad commission has shown itself to be of some actual value in the securing of better train service for St. Albans. How would a hearing do in this city?

That life insurance is considered by many to be a good investment is evident by the statistics of insurance payments made in Vermont during the past year, as is shown by The Insurance Press. Vermont residents were beneficiaries to the extent of $1,430,478.

In the short period he has been in office Gov. Bates of Massachusetts has already established a reputation for vetoing the work of the legislature. He has returned seven bills without his approval. Either the Massachusetts legislature has become over-confident of its power, or previous governors have been lax in their survey of the bills as they came to them.

The Rutland Herald considers that Mrs. Ellen O'Shea of its town has had a good deal of fun at the expense of the authorities there. This is what Mrs. O'Shea did. She threw liquor in the face of the chief-of-police, hoodwinked the grand juror and took a carriage ride into New York state out of the reach of Vermont courts. That was a good amount of amusement for one woman to get but the Rutland authorities probably did not look at it in that light.

Says the St. Albans Messenger: "There appears to be no grand rush on the part of the no license papers to deny the first reports of the Middlebury affair on the occasion of the opening of the bars there or to retract any of the I-told-you-so criticisms of the new liquor law that they made at the time. Of course, the fact is of no importance in and of itself, but it is significant as indicating the old time habit of our friends on the other side of shutting their eyes to whatever they did not want to see. Why cannot these newspapers be as fair in considering the new law as they ask the license papers to be?" A good deal of self control is necessary for a defeated man to accept his defeat gracefully, and up to this time the newspaper advocates of prohibition have not exhibited a striking degree of that quality. The only way to answer such critics is to let the law speak for itself, and the Times is pleased to note, that outside the rather disastrous opening at Middlebury the law is speaking in a manner entirely creditable to itself. It is not going too far to say that the law is meeting the expectations of its friends, and it is evident also that its conduct has not been entirely unsatisfactory to our prohibition friends if we are to judge by the following from the Rutland News: "It was a remarkably good Saturday night—the first one for open bars in Rutland. Only four drunks were in police court Monday as the result, although there were several others who ought to have landed there, for they were to all intents and purposes just as drunk as those who were captured. But probably the eyes of the officers didn't happen to land upon them. It is to be hoped that no Saturday night saturnalia will be worse, under the new regime."

The 33rd annual meeting of the Vermont Homeopathic Medical Society will be held at the Pavilion, Montpelier, Wednesday and Thursday, May 13 and 14.

The petition for the appointment of a receiver of the Queen City Park Association, which was to have been considered yesterday by Judge H. R. Start, has been continued a few days at the defendant's request as they wish time in which to formulate an answer to the bill.

C. H. Preble of Lincoln killed four bears last week, making a total of more than 100 bears that have fallen before his shooting. He has also killed 130 hedgehogs since the new law placing a bounty on them went into effect. Since July 15 he and his sons have received $123 from the town for killing seven bears and 130 hedgehogs.

The store of Charles Brush in East Middlebury was entered by burglars Friday night and $4.80 in pennies and a quantity of tobacco and cigars were taken. A complaint was made and Arthur Douglas and Perry Hunt were arrested by Constable E. M. Day Saturday evening. They were taken to Middlebury and lodged in the county jail.

GUARDS STOP SAGE.

Made to Show Credentials Before Entering New York Stock Exchange.

Three policemen and three uniformed attendants stood in line on the top step guarding the Wall street entrance to the New York Stock Exchange the other morning.

Shortly before 11 o'clock Russell Sage, leaning on the arm of a young man, attempted to enter, says the New York Herald. There was no break in the guard line, nothing in the faces of the men in uniform, that indicated that they saw any one.

"This is Mr. Sage," said the young man. The line made no sign of wavering.

Russell Sage could no more pass those portals than the gaping goblin in the gutter until he had shown his credentials. The young man got them out, Mr. Sage leaning heavily on his arm meanwhile. The zealous guards scanned them carefully and the line slowly parted to let in the financier and his attendant.
